

MAGASIN

The Magasin-Centre national d'art contemporain (CNAC) in Grenoble, created in 1986, has established itself as one of the most important art centers in Europe.

It occupies a space of 3000 m² in a former industrial building (with an Eiffel framework), converted by the architect Patrick Bouchain.

Located in the heart of the Bouchayer-Viallet district, at the entrance to the city and the metropolis, the Magasin-CNAC is part of an urban setting rich in cultural facilities.

Governed by an associative status (law 1901), the Magasin-CNAC carries out its priority missions of diffusion and production in the form of exhibitions presented in a dedicated space. It is supported by the Ministry of Culture, the City of Grenoble, the Auvergne-Rhône-Alpes Region and the Isère Departmental Council.

It is administered by a board of directors composed of representatives of the four public partners and qualified personalities in the field of contemporary art.
